SIR.

Adverting to your letter No. G. 2510/Pris dated 2nd August 1920 regarding the reclamation of adult criminals in the State Jails and requesting me to suggest suitable arrangements in this connection in consultation with the Inspector-General of Education, I have the honor to report as follows :-

(1) The Inspector-General of Education was consulted in the matter and his views on the subject are embodied in his letter No. 1595 dated 24th November 1920, a copy of which is sent herein enclosed for perusal.

(2) As I have no personal experience on the subject in the past, I feel diffident to express my opinion on the subject or to suggest any brilliant schemes. But from my short experience of the adult criminal population in the Jails under my charge, I am able to say that the "habituals" are an incorrigible class and the only means available to correct them is to make prison life intolerable and irksome. They should be made to do more task-work under strict supervision. To them crime is a hobby. Most of them also find a comfortable home in the Jail and one sees them coming in too often and in quick succession after their discharge. No amount of Thajanas will help to redeem them from their crimes.

(3) Regarding the 2nd type of adult criminals who are styled as casuals (both "lifers" and "termers") and who come to Jail for committing serious crimes such as murders etc., at a moment of sudden provocation, there is good scope of moulding their future career. The methods I would suggest are not unknown and we are working in these lines even now. Viz., in providing facilities to learn some kind of trade. And it is with that view that we have opened various branches of industry in the Jail so that when they leave the Jail, they may settle down in their villages to pursue a useful and a quiet life. Facilities for religious instructions are being given now on Sundays. If funds are avialable, a Chapel, a Temple and a Mosque may be provided and Flower Gardens around them may be encouraged to create devotion. But such a proposal is out of the question at present, when we are in need of funds to improve the sanitary condition of the old and dilapidated prisons in our midst.

Subject

Submits, proposals for educating adult prisoners in the Bangalore Central Jail

(4) I may also suggest that an experienced teacher with knowledge in English and the Vernacular and with some personality in him may be appointed; who will prove helpful to create a literary taste in the prisoners. Most of them are illiterate. If they are made to read and write their own mother tongue at least, it will be helpful to them to read religious and other books and to mould their charact

(5) If I am not mistaken, I believe the salvation army have undertakeh this great task in the North of India with the help of the Imperial Government. Their experiment in the past having been successful they wanted to start this onerous work on a large scale. The principle involved in their scheme, was to open out small colonies for farming and sericulture under expert supervision. If some such shheme is adopted here also , we may be sure of some 60 success. But I am no believer in Bhajanas, Temples and Churches as the only means of salvation. The salvation army are the only competent persons who could do this work in a way both pleasant to the criminals and economical to Government.

I have the honor to be,

Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

With reference to your letter No. 1164/150-90 dated 4th Augus 920 asking me to suggest suitable arrangements regarding the - eclamation of adult criminals in the State Jails, I have the hon o state that the subject of the reclamation of the adult crimina s one which stands on an entirely different footing from either t uestion of religious and moral instruction in schools or the sub f the reclamation of youthful criminals in reformatories. Methods f instructions which might be fairly successful with youthful cr inals in reformatories like the Chengalput Reformatory are out of lace when dealing with hardened adult criminals who comprise the ajority of the inmates of State Jails. In the Chengalput Reforma- ory, a Christian Chapel, a Hindu Temple and a Muhommedan Mosque are rected within the premises for the use of the varicus sects of - upils, and teachers are appointed to impart religious instruction ith the aid of the Bible, the Quran etc,. The pupils say their rayers regularly in their respective places of worship with a tea her to lead them. There is no special syllabus but the general rinciples of each religion are taught little by little with the a f short stories from the Bible, Puranas etc,. The boys are kept ully engaged during week days by giving them work in classes prov ing for general literary instruction for 2½ hours daily and in - ndustrial classes for 6 hours daily. It is obvious that these - ethods will not answer satisfactorily in the case of the majority f adult criminals in Jails.

The first condition for successful religious and moral ins- ruction in the case of adults, whether criminals or not, is that ttendance should be made voluntary and not enforced on pain of unishment. Inducements may, however, be offered for ensuring as arge an attendance as possible. Also the inmates of Jails should b reated more as a congregation met for religious service or practi- l worship than as a class assembled for instruction. The teacher should also be men of sufficient weight and respectability to be able to command the reverence due to ~~are~~ a religious teacher rath than the grudging obedience given to a Government employed who is paid to give religious or moral instruction.

It appears to me that the following scheme may answer the purposes laid down by Government in their review of the Administration Report of Jails and Lock-ups for 1918-19.

(1) A Chapel, Mosque and Temple may be built within the prem ses of each Jails for the use of the various sects and placed und the control of the Muzrai Department ~~of~~ for the purpose of appoin ing suitable religious teachers and worshippers on sufficiently high salaries.

(2) Church services in Chapels, the reading of Puranas like the Mahabharata, Ramayana, etc., in the Temples and the reading and recitation of the Quran etc.,-in the Mosques should form a principal feature.

(3) Attendance at all these religious services should be vol tary, but the Criminals who attend regularly may be permitted to - count the hours spent in religious worship as part of their daily labour; and such of the convicts as are able to show uniformly - good attendance and good conduct may be allowed a remission of a short period of imprisonment.

(4) Facilities may be given for the creation of flower garde in connection with the Hindu Temples and for the suitable decorations of Churches and Mosques as these are powerful agencies for influe cing the minds of the adult criminals and teaching them devotion. Work in this connection should also count towards daily labour.

(5) For such of the adult criminals as are able to read and write, a library of easy vernacular books may be provided. Adult classes for general instruction may also be opened but the attenda in all these classes should be on a voluntary basis. Illustrated news papers dealing with current topics, picture books and charts may also be provided and teachers of the adult classes may give ne necessary explantions.

(6) As music and mental recreation have considerable influence in reclaiming men from criminal tendencies, every facility should be given for Bhajanas and Music parties, both as a part of daily routine and on special occasions.

I am of opinion that the organisation of all ~~this~~ these measures should be entrusted to an outside agency like the Muzrai Department if they are to produce full beneficial results.

If a reference to English Literature is permissible in this connection, it would, perhaps, not be out of place to refer to two chapters in Goldsmith's Vicar of Wakefield with his heading "A reformation in the Jail - To make laws complete, they should reward as well as punish", as indicating the direction in which all attempts for the reclamation of adult criminals should be based.
